Martin W. Korman is a partner at Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, where he heads the mergers and acquisitions practice, specializing in strategic transactions. During 2004, the firm completed approximately 100 M&A transactions.

Recently, American Lawyer magazine selected Marty as one of the top 45 attorneys in the United States under the age of 45. With over 15 years experience representing public and private companies in purchase and sale transactions, on both a friendly and contested basis, Marty is recognized as a leading M&A lawyer in the technology industry. He and the firm represent public companies including Autodesk, Hewlett-Packard Company and Sun Microsystems, Inc. in their ongoing acquisition programs. Among other transactions, Marty represented: Hewlett-Packard Company in its merger with Compaq; Netscape in its sale to America Online, Inc. (valued at over $4 billion); @home in its merger with Excite; Palm in its merger with Handspring; Infoseek in its merger with Disney; Healthon in its merger with WebMD; and Overture Services in its sale to Yahoo!. In addition, Marty has represented 10 companies in sale transactions to Cisco Systems.

Marty is a frequent guest lecturer on the subject of mergers and acquisitions. He has presented at a number of law schools throughout the country, including Columbia Law School, Stanford Law School and The Yale Law School.

Marty earned his J.D. from the The Yale Law School and his undergraduate degree from Stanford University.

He is admitted to practice in New York and California.
